PARENTS - BE THERE FOR YOUR KIDS

Friends play an important part in a child's life, but it's parents that meet their deepest emotional needs. Children need parents as much as they need air and water. Our acceptance and approval are critical to their sense of self-worth. That's why it's essential to look for opportunities to connect with our children and build into their future. Use mornings as a time of encouragement. Experts say that the first five minutes you spend with your child are the most important, so don't take that time lightly. Give them a big hug and a warm smile, and let that set the tone for the entire day. After school, ask them how their day went. Talk to them about whatever is on their mind, whether it's sports or friends or anything else. And listen. This is how you get to know what's going on in their world. Always put them to bed with a hug, and more words of encouragement.
